HOW BIG IS TEDDY ROOSEVELT, PA?

By STAURT MACLEAN

Then is he tall as any tree,
That stretches to the sky?
Can he look far beyond the clouds
And see the by and by?

No, no, my lad; he's come out short
Each year's administration;
Nor can he tell who by and by
Will choose for nomination.

But isn't he, of history,
The greatest diplomat?
Look what he did at Portsmouth, pa.
Who else could have done that?

No, no, my lad; do not forget
The things that you have read;
For many diplomats have lived
And most of them are dead.

How big is Teddy Roosevelt, pa.
That men should call him great?
Is he as big as Mr. Taft,
A good three hundred weight?

No, no, my lad; he's not so stout,
Such stories bear him malice;
He's only big enough to make
Taft's chaplain Miss Alice.

They say he'll put down grafting, pa.
And settle wages rates;
So is he not much bigger than
The whole United States?

No, no, my lad; the senate's there,
And congressmen are cheap;
He's only small potatoes, and
But few in any heap.

Then I can't understand it, pa.
Why men should call him great;
It seems to me, the way they talk,
He ought to go by freight?

Oh, prithee, listen, pretty lad,
He's great—and yet the others are
Such very little men.

HOW UNCLE SAM'S SOLDIER BOYS WERE SAVED BY AN INDIAN MAIDEN

Kingman, Ariz., Sept. 26.—In the death of Levy the Hualapai tribe has lost a heroine and the American government a friend. The Indian curio buyers too will miss her. Levy was chosen by Charley to be his third wife. The pretty little squaw could not disobey, for the chief's word is law. But she determined to warn her lieutenant at Fort Beal of his danger. So taking some baskets with her to avoid suspicion, she stole into the fort on her hands and knees. She asked for the lieutenant, much to the amusement of the other officers, and the discomfort of the lieutenant himself.

Not knowing English enough to make herself understood she acted the whole raid out in pantomime. The officers gathered about Levy as she illustrated the stealthy approach of her tribe the quick dealing with the guards, and the gazing and stabbing of the outposts. Then she crawled into the midst of the officers, stabbing love for the dashing young officer.

That night General Beal, with a few chosen soldiers, marched to the canyon where the Indians were in hiding and surprised them in the midst of their war dance. They were covered from head to foot with war paint and the light from the blazing camp fires made them easy targets for the practiced aim of the white men. The difficulty was settled once for all.

The Hualapai tribe was shattered. Although the chief lived and many of his warriors, their spirit was broken and they decided that it was wiser to be the white man's friend than his enemy.

As one of the wives of the chief, Levy held a position in the tribe greatly envied by all the other squaws. The chief's two first wives died, so Levy was Charley's only means of support, for the chief would not lower his dignity by working.

Levy washed for the white people in the town and made the finest baskets of any squaw in her tribe. Her one joy in life was her son Johnnie, whom she aimed to bring up in more righteous ways than those of his father. She had great aspirations for him.

One day Levy was presented with a cast off Pauntleroy blouse and flaming red ribbon tie. His mother was mightily pleased. Johnnie stood before her in all his glory, but still his face wore a martyred look. The blouse and tie were in their right places, but, alas, that was as far as it went. From the waist down Johnnie was clothed only in his natural state.

This was the beginning of Johnnie's civilization. He was sent to the Indian school at Phoenix, where he is now a member of the band, and a very presentable youth in his gray uniform.

Hualapai Charley became a brute from drink, and poor Levy had to bear the brunt of his ill humor and abuse. While up in the mountains gathering pine nuts this summer Levy caught cold. Not having the proper care her condition grew worse and one day Charley came home crazed by bad whiskey and beat her to death. Charley went to jail for a few weeks instead of being transformed into a "Good Indian" by due process of law, as he deserved.

Whenever Levy saw a military uniform a tender look would come into her eyes and the little droop to the shoulders that followed was the only outward sign she ever gave of the heart tragedy which had early come into the life of the pretty Indian maiden.

FIREPLACE MOTTOES OF VARIOUS KINDS.

It has long been an idea of the homemaker that his rooms should express their meaning in furnishing and arrangement. Lately he has taken to putting this meaning into words in some brief, quaint motto put up somewhere about the room where it will speak a fitting sentiment to inmates and visitors.

Over the fireplace in Mark Twain's home in Connecticut is this inscription: "The ornament of a home is the guests who frequent it." Most of us have read of the man who had over his fireplace a motto like this: "I have had many troubles in my life and most of them never happened."

Then there was the young couple who put over their living room fireplace the suggestive hint: "In this room speak ill of no one," which checked many a garrulous tongue.

Another good fireplace motto is "Sit here and rest awhile."

Here are others that will serve for hall, library and chimney corner:

"A man's house is his castle."

"Our home is ever at your service."

"East or west, home is best."

"Oh, ye fire and heat, bless ye to Lord."

"Our ain fireside."

"Old wood to burn, old friends to trust, old books to read."

"There is an art in reading."

"The monuments of vanished minds."

One that would do for either library or nursery is: "Infinite riches in a little room."

Others for the nursery are:

"God rest ye, little children."

"A child in the house is a well-spring of pleasure."

For the music room or that corner of the house where music holds sway good mottoes are:

"The hidden soul of harmony."

"The speech of angels."

AMUSEMENTS

MRS. ESTELLA GILLETTE MOULTON HERE THURSDAY NIGHT—
"RAMONA" SATURDAY NIGHT.

Grand opera is related to ordinary music about as the work of Milton or Shakespeare is to the simple poetry of magazines. Its superiority cannot be questioned, but this makes it very difficult to understand. In addition to this few except the best trained foreign artists are capable of rendering it satisfactorily, so it is rarely heard except in the larger cities.

Estella Gillette Moulton has made an extensive study of grand opera under the very best masters. She has sung the chief soprano roles in nearly all of the best known operas. Next Thursday evening she will sing an aria from Weber's "Der Freischütz" at the Elks opera house. This magnificent song is so filled with rich harmonies and action that it often fills a popular audience with the greatest enthusiasm, while it never fails to stir deeply all musicians and lovers of good music. The whole song thrills with dramatic action.

"Ramona" Saturday Night

The tremendous hit "Ramona," a drama founded upon Helen Hunt Jackson's novel, "Ramona," of international fame, with gorgeous scenic equipment, and a company of splendid artists, will appear at Elks' opera house on Saturday night, September 30. "Ramona" is a play of rare promise. It has all the elements that make for success. Full of strong dramatic climaxes, emotional power, and a delicious comedy element that is irresistible. It cannot fail to satisfy the most critical. The keenest interest has been aroused in this romance of romances and indications are that every seat will be made before the U. S. court commission at Albuquerque, N. M., on November 4, 1905, viz: Donaciano Valencia, for the southwest quarter of section 2, township 8 north, range 6 east.

A quick, pleasant and certain cure for headache, constipation, etc., 25c at all druggists; guaranteed.

KEITH'S MAGAZINE.

The October number of Keith's Magazine on home building, is full of interesting and suggestive articles for the prospective builder. This is one of the choicest numbers issued, the opening article being "An Entrance, and Within," fully illustrated, followed by the publishers' own building experience, giving a photo view of his new home with interiors, hints for the fall garden, an attractive group of typical American homes, a chapter on oriental rugs, a complete house decorative scheme, and problem No. 6 in series "That Dormer Problem," which is skillfully handled by Arthur C. Clauson, with diagrams of various styles of dormers.

In addition, are seven designs for the home builder, with full floor plans and descriptive matter. These are followed by the usual departments, decorating and furnishing, household economics and table chat, etc.

Published by M. L. Keith, Minneapolis, Minn., $1.50 per year.

MR. AND MRS. BUYERS,

Albuquerque, N. M.

From questions that are asked by customers, and reports which come to me of what is said about THE GLOBE STORE, I am compelled to believe that persons of envious dispositions are busily engaged in misrepresenting my stock and methods of doing business. For the purpose of silencing such underhand competition, this letter is addressed to you.

THE GLOBE STORE stock is entirely new, absolutely correct in styles, and of undoubted superiority in quality. In buying these goods all so-called "bargains," "job lots," "short end," and "off styles" were thrown aside—not a piece of shoddy or cheap stuff has found a place on THE GLOBE STORE shelves, and this policy will be adhered to rigidly in the future.

The stock consists of fine dress goods in all the latest fabrics, white and colored wash goods, household linens, ladies', gentlemen's and children's furnishings, embroideries, laces, ribbons, buttons of all kinds, and other notions entering into such a stock. In addition, we have the exclusive sale of Diamond Brand Shoes for ladies, gentlemen and children. These shoes are the best, having been declared such by the St. Louis Exposition experts.

Your special attention is called to the Mentor Underwear for ladies and children, for which THE GLOBE STORE has the exclusive agency; coat shirts, union underwear, and quarter-sized collars for gentlemen. Our line of ladies' and gentlemen's neckwear cannot be equalled in the city.

Now, as to THE GLOBE STORE business methods: All goods are marked in plain figures, at the lowest possible percentage of profits, and those prices will be paid by all who purchase. No reduction will be made to anyone, nor for any quantity. Every sale is made under a positive guarantee of satisfaction or purchase money refunded and no questions asked. Misrepresentation by any clerk is cause for immediate discharge.

In substantiation of the above words, an invitation is extended to every one to visit THE GLOBE STORE, examine the articles offered for sale, get prices, and make comparison of values with all other stores in Albuquerque. No one is asked to buy, and it will give us pleasure to show goods.

Yours very truly,

OTTO L. RICE.
